1. Read the following passage and answer the questions :

Gandhiji visited different places to collect funds for India's freedom struggle. Once he visited Odisha. There he met an old woman. She could not stand straight. Her hair was grey. Her sari was torn. She went near Gandhiji and touched his feet. Then she gave him a coin. Jamanlal Bajaj's duty was to keep the funds.

He asked Gandhiji for the coin, but Gandhiji refused. Jamanlal was surprised . "I keep thousands of rupees," Jamanlal said.

"This coin is worth much more than those thousands," Gandhiji told him. "If a man has lakhs, he can give a thousand of two. But this coin was perhaps all she had. What a great sacrifice! So, I value this coin more than a crore of rupees," Gandhiji explained. He kept that coin with him forever.

Thoughts of love, peace and equality filled Gandhiji's works. Swami Vivekananda and Rabindranath Tagore also had similar ideas. Swami Vivekananda wanted unity among all religions. He spoke about it in 1893 at Chicago. Rabindranath Tagore started the Raksha Bandhan in 1905. It was a festival of brotherhood and communal harmony.

These three great men have become immortal for their thoughts and works.
